Privacy Policy

Habitat for Humanity is committed to respecting the privacy of online visitors and pledges its best efforts to that end. In general, you can visit Habitat for Humanity on the Web without telling us who you are or revealing anything about yourself.

Our Web server automatically recognizes each visitor's domain name, but does not automatically collect personally identifiable information. There are times, however, such as when you place a product order or register for an event, that we will collect specific information. If you choose to provide personally identifiable data, you may receive future information from us—by mail, electronically or by telephone--advising you of upcoming Habitat for Humanity events, services, new products, or volunteer and support opportunities. If you do not wish to be contacted with such information, please update your Volunteer Profile.

A "cookie" is a small piece of data stored on your computer's hard drive when you visit our Web site. Habitat uses cookies to analyze our Web site's overall traffic patterns and improve our visitors' online experience. We do not use cookies to store or collect any personal information. Many browsers provide an option to block or remove cookies. You can visit our website successfully while blocking cookies, but leaving cookies enabled in your browser will help us to improve our site's usability and effectiveness. Some areas of our online volunteer registration, orientation, and other areas require the use of cookies in order to maintain the security of your information, and allow you to go from one page to the next without entering your information multiple times.

In order to provide a more comprehensive and useful site, the Habitat for Humanity Web site contains links to other Web sites. Habitat for Humanity is not responsible for the privacy practices of these sites.